MAKING MONEY

Some Ideas on the Subject.

Carlisle's Plan Contrasted With Eckels's.

A Republican Financial Authority Finds the Latter the Better Measure.

The Reserve and the Interexchange Features of the Propositions—William St. John Has a Scheme.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Secretary Carlisle's plan of currency reform is naturally attracting great attention in and out of Congress. The Secretary, it is expected, will appear before the House Committee on Banking and Currency to answer any questions that may be asked in further explanation of his proposition and to assist in the preparation of bill covering his views on the subject, which will soon be introduced by Chairman Springer. While Carlisle's plan is favorably commented upon by many prominent members of both houses, there are others whose opinions are of value who argue that the plan proposed by Comptroller Eckels in his annual report has superior merit and, when thoroughly understood, will meet with general approval. A prominent Senator, who is recognized as an authority on financial matters, explained to a representative of the Associated Press his views on the two plans. He said:

"Mr. Carlisle's plan for currency reform, when applied to practice will produce the following result: Taking for the purpose of illustration the example of a bank having $100,000 capital, such a bank would be entitled to issue notes up to the limit of $75,000, 75 per cent. of capital, but before doing so it must deposit 'legal tender' notes to the amount of $22,500, 30 per cent. of circulation. This in effect would be equivalent to a net issue of $52,500 in circulation by the bank, or $75,000 received in notes from the government, plus $22,500 in notes deposited with the government."

"Upon this $52,500 of currency the bank would earn its profits, provided it could keep them in circulation, after deducting costs for redemption for tax for 'safety' fund and tax for administration of the Comptroller's Bureau. As a plan for relieving the burden of the government from the burden and charge for redeeming United States notes, it would, according to the Secretary's estimate, result in securing the temporary deposit of $22,500,000 of these notes with the government if the 'national' and 'State' banks now in existence should take out circulation to the full amount proposed."

"Let us see how this result could be arrived at. The present capital of all national banks in existence is about $68,000,000. If to this is added $22,500,000 as the capital of State banks, availing themselves of the privilege, a total capital of $1,000,000,000 would be had as the basis upon which to issue currency. Assuming that all the banks possessing this capital issued currency up to the full limit of 75 per cent. we will have an issue of bank currency to the amount of $750,000,000. Against this, legal tenders to the amount of 30 per cent. of circulation must be deposited, or $225,000,000."

"What will be the effect of this upon the volume of money in circulation?"

"Add bank-note issues, $750,000,000, less national bank currency, $172,000,000; legal tender deposited and withdrawn from circulation, $225,000 would operate to hold them from redemption by the banks.

Passing to the other features of Mr. Eckels's plan it is found that a bank with $100,000 capital could also issue as much as $50,000 of safety fund notes, constituting a first lien upon the assets of the bank, liability of the stockholders, and redeemable upon the failure of the bank promptly out of a "safety fund" created by a light tax upon all banks issuing this kind of circulation. It is upon this class of notes that the banks should make a profit which would be clear of overhead and above the light expenses for cost of redemption and insurance for the safety fund and for cost of operating the Comptroller's bureau. It is in this class of currency that the element of "elasticity" would be found for which banks could issue out of its capital.

"Of the national bank capital 50 per cent. would be $34,000,000, or a sum $162,000,000 greater than the total of the present national bank circulation, $172,000,000, while a capital of $1,000,000 would provide for $500,000 of this "safety" fund, which would be the expansion or contraction of this currency, and thus it can easily be extended in future if necessary by reducing the percentage of legal tender currency to be supported by the bank, and extending the limit for safety funds' currency beyond 50 per cent. of capital. The legal tender currency cut off by Mr. Eckels plan of substitution of banknotes, the practical result would be that all the paper currency would be redeemable only in gold or silver coin, and there would exist only one kind of banknotes, gold certificates and silver certificates."

ANOTHER PLAN OF RELIEF.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—At a meeting last night of the Chamber of Commerce, William P. St. John, president of the Mercantile National Bank, said that it was officially proposed that Congress provide profit to banks on banknotes by a scheme surrendering a profit of $10,300,000 a year to the people at large in United States notes. He characterized the scheme as preposterous, and submitted the following plan:

Fist—Congress to remove from our standard silver dollar of 412.5 grains 9-10 fine, the single restriction of its legal tender function, and provide unlimited coinage of silver into this dollar, on the terms prescribed for gold.

Second—Issue to depositors gold and silver at the rate of 10 per cent., interest, to which they are entitled, coin certificates redeemable on demand, require that these coin certificates be redeemed in gold or silver coin at the convenience of the United States. To authorize the Secretary of the Treasury in his discretion to redeem them on request in standard bars of gold or silver.

Third—Issue of coin certificates of gold and silver coin to remove the proposed coin certificates therefor, and forbid all further issuing of gold certificates, silver certificates and treasury notes of 1890.

Fourth—Until bimetallism is a real achievement under this act, require that all the gold and silver for which coin certificates are issued be received in coin and sent back for their redemption, except as next suggested.

Fifth—Authorize the Secretary, in his discretion and under regulations prescribed by him, to direct the Treasurer of the United States to receive interest-bearing bonds of the United States duly hypothecated to the amount of the principal of the coin and interest bars received, and their redemption shall not be less at any time than 60 per cent. of the aggregate sum of all coin certificates outstanding. It is explained that this final provision would be available in an emergency for this reason. For the owners of bonds would have no second home but as a consequence of the interest on their investment and, second, borrowers of 4 per cent. and 5 per cent. United States bonds, hired to hypothecate for such loans, should appear when only a real emergency made high rates for money in the market.

The coin market party threatened the proposed enactment with a sharp contraction of the aggregate of money, a final provision would empower the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $200,000,000 of United States coin certificates against silver coin and bullion now in the treasury and loaned out at 4 per cent. and 5 per cent. per annum against United States interest-bearing bonds.

"If a lack of engraved coin certificates threaten the Secretary's immediate convenience," says St. John, "I suggest that bold-faced equities will issue an interest-bearing bond will immediately substitute silver certificates therefor."

The proposition and remarks were received without objection and filed without action. The chamber adopted resolutions adverse to any further tariff legislation at present on the ground that conditions should be allowed to become settled.

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE HEARING.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The programme for speedy consideration of the financial plan proposed by the President and Secretary Carlisle was arranged by the House Committee on Banking and Currency today. The two resolutions were passed. The Comptroller Eckels was invited before committee at 10 a.m. Monday, and that the hearing close Saturday, December 15. The sentiment among the Democrats was for proceeding as fast as possible, and reporting a bill before the holiday recess.

The second resolution authorized Chairman Springer to invite the members of the committee, not more than five, to give their views. It was carried, although Walker and Johnson (Republicans) opposed it. The third resolution was adopted. It authorizes a call of committee at any time, and makes five a quorum. This is to prevent delays in speedy presentation of the bill. The meeting disclosed that there would be no factious opposition from Republicans toward getting the bill before the House.

OFF-COLOR OPEL.

A St. Louis Family Airs its Troubles in the Divorce Court.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

ST. LOUIS, (Mo.) Dec. 7.—In the Opel divorce case today several striking scenes were developed. Mrs. Opel was put on the stand. Interest reached its climax when the complainant told of bitter accusations of vile insinuations against her wife's conduct, obscene words and oaths alleged to have been heaped upon her by her husband in public and private for several years, culminating in a declaration by him in a legal document, before either party sought divorce, that she was unchaste.

No less dramatic was the testimony of 14-year-old Myra Opel, who was a witness to one stormy scene between her parents at the Southern Hotel. Myra was put on the stand to corroborate the testimony of her mother and did so emphatically. Several other witnesses were examined and the case was adjourned until Saturday morning when Mrs. Opel will resume her testimony.

A Russet Apple.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Dec. 7.—James W. Hawkins, a farmer, just arrived from Lowry, Mo., met two strangers who represented themselves to be in sore straits. To help them out, he advanced $25 on a $175 draft on the banking firm of Clark & Lar-dner, of St. Louis, Mo., which was signed "A Russet Apple." Finding the draft uncancelable, Hawkins has told his troubles to the police.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Augusta, Ga., Herald, an afternoon paper in that city, has withdrawn from the Southern Associated Press and signed a 90-year contract with the Associated Press.

Madison Races—Watterson Drops Dead at Bay District—Bookies Withdraw on Account of Poor Business.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association, which has been in session for the past three days, completed its work today and adjourned.

A resolution was handed in, declaring that the mare at Wakefield, Neb., declared by R. E. Kneebees and his representatives to be the bay mare Bethel, is not the mare Bethel. Kneebees is now in prison in Germany, charged with using the mare Bethel as a "ringer." Aside from this, it is asserted that Bethel is in this country. The board has now upset his claim by its decision.

NOT A BONANZA.

The Bookmakers at Bay District Have Lost Money.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—It is stated that the present race meeting at the Bay District track has not proved a bonanza to all of the twenty-three bookmakers who appeared in the ring with the beginning of the season. Five of them have been compelled to leave the ring, and it is stated that their combined losses amount to fully $50,000. Hopkins & Co., Carpenter & Co., Kennedy & Cole, Ed Smith and Eli Pearl are the "bookies" who have taken down their signs.

YESTERDAY'S RACES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—Ed Corrigan's gelding Watterson dropped dead in the second race today. There were only two horses running and after going half a mile at top speed a blood vessel burst in Watterson's head and he dropped.

His Jockey, Hill, fell in the soft mud and was uninjured. Corrigan paid $300 for Watterson. As usual the betters picked the winners in the first two races and, after that went all to pieces.

BROKEN HANDS.

The "Saginaw Kid" Yields to Billy Mahan of California.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

DENVER, Dec. 7.—Paddy Purcell, the "Saginaw Kid," and Billy Mahan of California, weltersights, met at the Central Theater tonight for a finish fight. The stake was $500 a side. It was after midnight when they entered the ring. Bat Masterson was chosen referee. Up to the tenth round both were cautious and not much hard punching was done.

Tenth round—Both men were deemed wicked, but sparred cautiously for an opening. "Kid" landed a left on Billy's chin and followed it shortly afterward with a neck-and-mouth blow with his left. They sparred and Mahan landed a light left on the "Kid's" head, and the "Kid" responded in the nose. Mahan got in a good left on Purcell's mouth, and after sparring, repeated it. Time was called.

MISS GING'S DEATH.

The Authorities Have not Solved the Murder Mystery.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) Dec. 7.—Although the Haywood brothers are in cells charged with murder in the first degree, it is frankly admitted by the authorities that they have not laid hands on the man who fired the shot which killed Miss Ging. In fact, while they have made great progress, they are really a long ways away from solving the mystery as to the identity of the actual murderer.

It is believed that a warrant is out for the apprehension of the man, but the authorities will neither affirm nor deny that they know who it is. From an inside source, however, it is learned that they confidently expect his arrest very shortly. The alibis of the Haywood brothers are perfect, so far as the time of the actual murder is concerned.

An important admission made by Hayward to the authorities which has just leaked out is that Miss Ging was his mistress. He admitted the liaison and in the next breath denied emphatically that he had murdered her. It is known, too, that Hayward was very much attached to a young lady whom he took to the theater on the night of tragedy. He was in fact, engaged to marry her, and the day has been set. The authorities believe that this fact may furnish the additional motive needed to explain the crime.

Gov. West left tonight for Monticello for a conference with Lieut.-Col. Larson, THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT'S REPRESENTATIVE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Secretary of the Interior has directed Agent Day of the Southern Ute Agency in Colorado to proceed to the section of Utah invaded by the Colorado Utes and endeavor to persuade them to return to their reservation. He will leave tomorrow for the scene of the trouble, which is about thirty hours from the frontier town. There are several hundred of the dissatisfied Indians in Utah, and the effort to induce them to go back to their Colorado home is expected to prove a difficult matter.

The New Russian Policy.

POSEN, Dec. 7.—A dispatch from Warsaw, Russian Poland, says that Gen. Gourko, Governor of Warsaw, from Tuesday received a telegram from the Russian Minister of the Interior, conveying to him the order not to interfere with the Catholic clergy and not to impose any orders upon them. Gen. Gourko tendered his resignation December 1, and the Governor-General of Odessa, Puschkin, has been designated to succeed him.

Governor-elect Morton.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—At a reception accorded Governor-elect Morton at the Union League Club last night, Mr. Morton shook hands with 220 people. Gov. McKinley arrived at 11 o'clock, but Rep.-elect Gov. Thomas C. Platt and Thaddeus Reed did not come. At midnight Gen. Porter stated that there would be no speech-making, but Gov. McKinley was called upon to make a speech at a late hour.

NOT TO BE GUYED.

A Youthful Merchant Kills One of His Tormentors.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

JEFFERSONVILLE (Ind.) Dec. 7.—At Hibernia, twenty-five miles from this city, Miles Smith, a merchant, 23 years old, last night shot and killed William Pettit, aged 24, a young man belonging to a prominent firm.

The murderer was the result of a quarrel, which was caused by young Pettit calling at the store of Smith with a crowd of companions for the purpose of gaging Smith, which they had been in the habit of doing, much to the displeasure of Smith. The murderer was brought here and placed in jail.

A Commissioner Indicted.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—It was stated this morning that the grand jury has indicted Police Commissioner Sheehan for contempt of court in failing to obey a summons issued by the city's private bookseller, Low Committee. It was also stated that a bench warrant had been sent out. No one can be found in the District Attorney's office who will either confirm or deny the rumor.

BLOWS FROM THE CARS.

Ben Charmak, a Woodland Merchant, Killed Last Night.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 7.—A distressing thing occurred tonight between here and Davisville, at about the point where the overland train was robbed not long ago.

Among the passengers on the train for Woodland leaving here at 5 p.m. was Ben Charmak, a merchant of that place.

The night was stormy and a strong wind was blowing. On the hillside plain it was dark. One of the men in the smoking-car to get his ticket from his overcoat in the passenger-coach and as he was passing from one car to the other he lost his balance and was blown off the platform. Two men saw him go off the platform and gave the alarm. The train stopped to look for him, but the unfortunate man could not be found. The crew of two incoming trains also kept a lookout along the road, but Charmak was not seen. The railroad company has sent out an engine and crew to search for him. The night is bitterly cold.

LATER.—At 1 a.m. last hour tonight the dead body of Charmak was found alongside the railroad track.

IN A BOX.

MUTILATED REMAINS FOUND AT CHICAGO.

They are Identified as Those of A. D. Barnes, a News-and-fruit-stand Proprietor—His Family Troubles.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The chopped and hacked body of a man was discovered in a shipping-case in the alley between Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth streets. The body had apparently been cut up to fit the case and shipped from a distant point. The head was not badly mutilated, and the police hope for an identification of the remains, which have been placed in the South Side Morgue.

The shipping-case bears a French stamp, indicating that the body was shipped from France. The body is that of a man about 40 years old, of refined appearance. The head is partially bald, the face clean-shaven, except for a long blonde mustache. In the case, carefully wrapped in paper, was found a lock of dark fine hair, evidently that of a woman.

The box was marked "G. P. Peters," numbered 2182, and stamped "Made in France." Trace of marks from which they had been carefully disengaged, making them unreadable. The doctors said the man could not have been dead more than two days, and it was thought a French-shipped case was used to divert suspicion. With the body were found a pipe, a comb, a watch chain and a small pocket knife.

The doctors said the man could not have been dead more than two days, and it was thought a French-shipped case was used to divert suspicion. With the body were found a pipe, a comb, a watch chain and a small pocket knife.

The shipping-case bears a French stamp, indicating that the body was shipped from France. The body is that of a man about 40 years old, of refined appearance. The head is partially bald, the face clean-shaven, except for a long blonde mustache. In the case, carefully wrapped in paper, was found a lock of dark fine hair, evidently that of a woman.

The box was marked "G. P. Peters,"

HATCH ACQUITTED.

The A. R. U. Striker Not a Murderer.

Three Ballots Taken—Only Two Juries Favored Conviction at any Time.

A Denial that Spreckels Bought Chino Ranch—Mr. Budd on Banquets—Farmers' Alliance. Election Frauds.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

WOODLAND, Dec. 7.—Melville E. Hatch, Sacramento, member of the Board of Metallurgy of the A.R.U., was acquitted by a jury this afternoon of the charge of murder, preferred against him, as a result of the train-wreck, during the recent strike, in which Engineer Clark and four United States soldiers were killed. Harry Knox, chairman of the Board of Mediation, and three other A.R.U. men are yet to be tried on similar charges. S. G. Worden, one of the accused strikers, has already been convicted and sentenced to be hanged.

Carroll Cook closed his argument for the prosecution in the Hatch case at 11:30 o'clock a.m., and Judge Grant immediately began to read his instructions. The case was given to the jury at noon, and the Sheriff was instructed to take the jurors to lunch before locking them up.

The jury was locked up at 1 o'clock, and at 1:30 p.m. there was a knock on the door, and the announcement was made that verdict had been reached. The jury was called in, and announced a verdict of not guilty. There were three ballots taken; the first ballot they stood for acquittal and two for conviction. On the second, only one stood out for conviction, and on the third ballot the vote was unanimous.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

WOODLAND, Dec. 7.—Melvin Hatch is a free man and nobody is more surprised at the result than his own father and mother. The elder Hatch expected nothing but a disagreement of the jury, and the prevailing opinion was in accord with him. There were number, among them lawyers, who believed that there would be a hung jury. After the trial, and in masterly closing argument, made a very marked impression upon the spectators, and even Hatch's most ardent friends seemed to lose hope as the chain of evidence, link by link, was forged. Only a man who is skilled in the law and who has made a patient study of it, could have seen the phase of the case could forge it.

There was a great deal of speculation among some people as to which of the jurors could be depended upon to hang out for acquittal. Some said there would be three, some two, and a number counted on only one. What was true, however, was in the nature of a surprise, and it was the absorbing topic of conversation tonight. Such a verdict at the end of three or four days would probably not have excited much talk, but it is considered extraordinary that an agreement should have been reached in so short time.

The trial was locked up at 1 o'clock. They discussed the matter fifteen minutes before taking a ballot. The first ballot resulted in ten for acquittal and two for conviction. On the second ballot, only one man stood out for conviction. On the third the vote was acquittal and two for conviction. When the result was reached, there was loud cheering in the jury room. The courtroom was almost deserted, but this cheering attracted attention, and the crowd came in with a rush. A moment later Juror York ran to the door and announced that a verdict had been reached. The jury was brought into the courtroom without any delay. Young Hatch was pale and nervous, and kept his eyes riveted upon the jurors. His wife was deeply agitated. Other members of the family gave no indication of any violent emotion. Judge Grant warned the audience not to make any demonstration.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the court, "have you arrived at a verdict?" "We have," came back in a chorus. "Arise and announce your verdict," said the court. "Twelve men instead of the foreman and in one voice exclaimed 'Not guilty.' The verdict was handed to the clerk, who read it aloud.

"Gentlemen of the jury," queried the court, "is that your verdict?" "It is," they all answered in one voice.

"You are discharged from further consideration in this case," announced the court.

A NEW STORM.

Frisco and Central California are Catching It.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—The storm which broke over Central California was the most severe of the season. Last night the Weather Bureau announced that the weather today would be of the clearing kind, but it proved to be the opposite, and seemed to storm even harder than yesterday. At 7 p.m. the wind was blowing 50 miles an hour from the southeast, thunder and lightning added their wildness, and for a time it looked as if a real Eastern thunderstorm had broken out.

When Weather Observer Hammond discovered that during the night there was about a visit this part of the State, he issued bulletins to that effect for the benefit of the shipping interests, and tonight some of the vessels that would have left the harbor are moored safely at their wharves. So far no great damage has been reported as a result of the storm. It is said that only 16 of an inch of rain fell within five minutes. Further storming is predicted for tomorrow.

ROBBED THE LANDLADY.

A Clerk in the Mansion House Accused of Embezzlement.

STOCKTON, Dec. 7.—R. C. Watkins, a young man who has been employed for two months past as clerk in the Mansion House, is accused by the proprietor, Mrs. Ritsloff, of being an embezzler of no mean ability. His defalcations during the period of two months are said to amount to nearly $1000.

Mrs. Ritsloff charges that, when given money to pay the bills of the house, Watkins would appropriate the coin and enter the bills on books as paid and that he also collected small amounts of money and made no account. The money was dissipated in gambling. Young Watkins's family resides in Berkeley. An attempt was made to prevent prosecution.

ELECTION EXPENSES.

A. J. Clunie Will Bring Charge Against Republican Candidates.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service. SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—Andrew J. Clunie is preparing charges of violating the purity of elections law against many prominent Republican candidates, most of whom were declared elected at the last election.

"The Republican State Central Committee alone spent over $150,000," said Mr. Clunie. "The Democratic State Central Committee had so little money that it hard work made it still obliged. We intend making a searching investigation into how this $150,000 was spent. Most of the Republican candidates seemed to have forgotten that there was a purity of elections law. They spent their money without stint, and the State Central Committee did the same. We knew that Mr. Spreckels made an enormous contribution to the election fund, as did Mr. Spreckels, Mr.

Tonight, on Hart's return from Woodland, he took the witness stand to testify against the prisoner. Great fun was expected by lawyers and others when Harlow stayed in to comment on the general, but they got even more than they bargained for. After asking a number of tantalizing questions Harlow finally got Hart so angry that he forgot the court's frequent warnings and replied in such terms that he was fined $25 for contempt of court. A few minutes later there was another outburst, and Hart was fined $50 more. This was repeated. In all there was next breath until finally the District Attorney implored the court not to be so severe on the witness, as he was greatly excited. All this time Harlow maintained his composure and seemed to take a sort of sick delight in probing his former friend and tutored. Once when the court reprimanded him for asking some questions, he apologized and reminded the court that it was a new business to him, and besides he had received his schooling in Gen. Hart's office. The case finally went over.

THE CHINO RANCH.
The Report that Spreckels Has Purchased it is Denied.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—It is positively denied today that Claus Spreckels has purchased from Richard Gird the Chino ranch of 40,000 acres, in San Bernardino county, with the beet-sugar factory, Chino townsite, the Chino Valley Railroad and other appurtenances.

Robert Oxnard, a brother of the Messrs. Oxnard, who own the beet-sugar factory at Chino, and who is associated in business with Claus Spreckels, was interviewed at Spreckels's office today. He said: "No such negotiation has been made, and none is in progress or in prospect."

THE REPORT WHICH IS DENIED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—Claus Spreckels drew a check for $15,000 on the Nevada Bank a few days ago, and it is known that the money was the consideration of a large land deal. This includes the purchase of 40,000 acres on which is located the Chino sugar factory. The deal was engineered by C. H. Phillips of San Luis Obispo and is said to be the largest real estate transaction the history of Southern California. The transaction includes the ownership of the Chino Valley Railway, a narrow-gauge road ten miles long, the water system and the contract with the Chino Valley Beet-sugar Company.

Installation of the Alliance Officers—The Platform.

WOODLAND, Dec. 7.—Melvin Hatch is a free man and nobody is more surprised at the result than his own father and mother. "You are discharged from further consideration in this case," announced the court.

Gen. Hart was not present, but Gaddis, the junior counsel for the defense, was as much affected as any member of the Hatch family.

Cook, the counsel for the prosecution, consoled Hart during the trial, and finally, as the jury filed out of the room each of them shook hands with Hatch and his family. The elder Mrs. Hatch and daughter, as well as the elder Hatch, were profoundly agitated. The defendant's wife was almost hysterical with joy, tears streaming copiously down her cheeks and in ecstasy of delight she declared: "I have not been so happy since the day I was married." The courtroom was filled with the wives and friends and sympathizers of the defendant, and there is no doubt that the verdict met with the approval of a majority of those present.

The Hatch family left for Washington on a late freight train. There is a rumor that a woman will be there for the arrest of Hatch on a charge of obstructing justice, but it cannot be traced to any reliable source. Attorneys here who represent the railroad company say that they have heard nothing of such a move. The crowd that watched the closing scenes of the Hatch trial had scarcely left the courtroom before the Alameda case was called, and the work of impeaching the jury was commenced in each. The work, however, was left to Attorney Gaddis for the defense, and Armstrong & Clark will assist the District Attorney. Whenever new witnesses are introduced, Attorney Cook for the prosecution, and Gen. Hart for the defense will be present. Only thirteen names remain in the venire, and when these were exhausted only two jurors could be obtained. The court ordered a venire to issue for forty additional jurors, returnable Tuesday morning.

FUN IN COURT.

Gen. Hart Hauled Over the Coals by a Former Pupil.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 7.—A rather sensational feature occurred in the Superior Court tonight, during the trial of a burglary case. A youth named Rains was caught in Lawyer A. L. Hart's house one night some week's ago, and his trial commenced yesterday. Gen. Hart being absent in Woodland, the District Attorney conducted the prosecution alone.

When the burglar occurred and for a year or two prior to that, William P. Harlow was a student in Hart's office, and two weeks ago was admitted to practice by the Superior Court. The first case he got was that of young Rains and when Hart was told of it he informed Harlow that Rains could not be defended by his office, so he and Hart severed their relations, both professionally and socially.

Tonight, on Hart's return from Woodland, he took the witness stand to testify against the prisoner. Great fun was expected by lawyers and others when Harlow stayed in to comment on the general, but they got even more than they bargained for. After asking a number of tantalizing questions Harlow finally got Hart so angry that he forgot the court's

FEED WILL BE SHORT.

Governor-elect Budd Will Frown on Banquets at State Institutions.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—Gov.-elect James H. Budd declines to name any of his appointees for State offices until after his inauguration. In discussing measures of economy relating to the State government, he expressed his intention to curtail the practice of lavish entertainments at the public asylums, prisons and other State institutions. He says that these expenses given by directors and superintendents cause the squandering of thousands of dollars of State funds.

After a more cursory examination of the expenses of State institutions and other State institutions he declared that, at a glance, almost, he could readily see where $100,000 a year could be saved to the State without in any way interfering with the efficiency of any of the administrative departments of the State.

The Crew of the Lost Lord Lyndhurst Arrive at San Diego.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 7.—The British ship Scottish Hills of Liverpool, Capt. J. R. Hamilton, from Swansea to San Diego, coal-laden, arrived outside tonight, 161 days out. She had on board Capt. Reynolds and seventeen of the crew of the British bark Lord Lyndhurst, who were disabled and separated shortly after the outrage was perpetrated.

Hadjin was a town of 1200 wooden houses, situated near Marash. The refuge states that on the night of October 23 four Turkish officers and two gendarmes set fire to the town, using petroleum to do the work. The mob then spread over the town. An Armenian named Meddekin Garabed, with his mother, witnessed the incendries at their work and fled for help. A Turkish official who was appealed to send help to extinguish the fire refused, perceiving that Garabed was aiding the rebels.

A TOUGH EXPERIENCE.

A Burned Man Walks a Long Distance Through Snow.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

ALBANY (Or.), Dec. 7.—Abram Jones, who lived alone on a homestead near Detroit, was terribly burned last night while asleep. The house caught fire and the flames soon spread to his bed. When awakened he was surrounded by fire. He rushed through the flames and escaped by breaking through a window. He ran out onto the snow, and on his nightshirt he walked a quarter of a mile through six inches of snow to the nearest neighbor, where help was given and a physician summoned. The ends of his fingers were burned off, his back and thighs were blistered and his face was frightfully disfigured.

Two coaches have been ordered, and are now on their way from England. The coach will be a half-way station, and the Burlingame Club will be the starting point.

The course of the United States has been marked by great indifference and a desire to refrain as far as possible from any entanglement in European politics. As the signatory powers of the Berlin treaty at the close of the Turk-Russian war had bound themselves to look out for the welfare of Christians in Turkey, it would be unwarranted to interfere with the United States in the affairs of those countries had this government taken any steps without solicitation from one or more of these powers beyond caring for the interests of United States citizens in Turkey. So Terrell to name a member of a committee on inquiry the request was, for political reasons.

Up to this point the government had been in doubt as to the reality of the reported outrages. The Turkish government had declared positively that the Armenian affair was nothing but rebellion, and it had been proposed in a legislative committee.

ENOUGH OF POLITICAL FANATISM.

The country is getting a pretty clear insight into the political faith and methods of Populism, and they are not such as impress us favorably, or that incline us to the belief that if the principles of the Populist party were fully carried out they would tend to the permanency of American institutions.

We all know what Populism was in Colorado while it had full sway, and that its complexion was the same in Kansas and South Carolina, and that it takes on the same revolutionary color in Alabama wherever its claims conflict with those of the other political parties, and that force is a weapon which it would not hesitate to use to secure the end that it seeks.

This readiness to defy the regularly-constituted authorities is a feature of Populism which the people should not overlook, for it is revolutionary and treasonable. Kolt's call on the Populists of his State to meet under arms to see that he was inaugurated Governor was a simple method of ignoring the fact that the recognized American method of fighting frauds at the polls is in the courts and by an appeal to a just public sentiment. These methods are the only legitimate ones to which the American people can appeal with safety, and the man in this free land of ours who proposes to resort to force is a political brigand and traitor. The tribunal of revolution proposed to be set up by this hot-headed Alabama Populist is not one that the American public will tolerate or allow. Closely-contested elections we have had before, even in the field of national politics, but rarely before have we heard this wild talk of a resort to arms to settle the dispute.

We do not forget that Presidential contest when the whole country waited with loyal patience for the official count, and with what law-abiding readiness it accepted the result. Never was the value of American sovereignty more fully tested, or the might and virtue of the ballot more fully sustained. If these Populist Governors and gubernatorial pretenders persist in carrying out their schemes and peculiar theories they should be dealt with as revolutionary traitors and should receive the punishment which treason merits.

Kolt's message to the people of Alabama, advising his supporters to delay paying their taxes, is worthy of the revolutionary spirit which has characterized so many South American States, where stability in government is a thing almost unknown. It is time that the Republican party held the reins of power again, and that clear-headed American statesmanship and patriotism prevailed once more. We have had enough of political fanaticism and of unbridled lust for power. Liberty under law is the corner-stone upon which we have reared the grand structure of American freedom, and law must everywhere be supreme if we would have liberty endure.

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls, in a recent speech in Boston, thus describes the late Lewelling regime in Kansas: "If the sworn, specified, detailed and documented accusation of their own leaders is to be believed, the Populist administration in Kansas has been the most profligate, debased, degraded and disgraceful government ever known in any State of the Union. Before it Tammany pales its ineffectual fires."

But we have reason to believe that the awakening reason and conscience of the American people are eager to send Populism to its death, and are making themselves ready for the rule of that party which saved them in the past from the assaults of treason and brought them out from the darkness of civil strife into an era of unparalleled prosperity and growth.

Glen Miller, writing in the December Forum, takes an optimistic view of the situation in Utah with relation to the practice of polygamy, which he says is rapidly declining and will within another generation be a thing of the past. The prop of polygamy has been taken away, since it has ceased to be regarded as a religious virtue or as socially respectable. Those who still practice it do so stealthily, not openly and boastfully, as formerly. Mr. Miller says:

"We find a close analogy to this condition of things in the prohibition States, where, in spite of stringent laws, the old toper undergoes any humiliation to secure his favorite beverage. Human nature does not differ greatly in New York, Massachusetts, Kansas or Utah. But with the passing away of the present generation

AN OFFICIOUS DEMAGOGUE.

Carroll D. Wright, Labor Commissioner, is lobbying for the passage, by Congress, of a bill creating a permanent national board of arbitration. A Washington dispatch says that "Mr. Wright's experience in the Presidential Commission which recently investigated the Pullman strike is depended on to give practical form to the plan of national arbitration." If the work of that commission is to be regarded as any indication of what the work of the proposed national board of arbitration will be, it would be folly for the government to waste any money upon it.

The report of the Pullman Strike Commission, which is understood to have been written by Mr. Wright, is so grossly misleading, unfair and illogical as to be practically worthless and decidedly mischievous. Commissioner Wright has shown himself to be a demagogue of the rankest type, and Congressmen who allow themselves to be influenced by him in the framing of laws will make a very grave mistake.

It is doubtful if a State paper more injurious to both labor and capital than the report of the Pullman Strike Commission has ever been published. Its baleful effect will be most severely felt by labor; for its utterances are directly in line with those of Debs and other jaw-workers, who libel the cause of labor in assuming to speak for it, and who deceive, rob, and oppress the laboring man while pretending to champion his cause.

Congress should have no more to do with Carroll D. Wright and his officious suggestions than with Coxey and his vagaries.

One of Cleveland's consuls in Wales declares in an interview that "the American tinplate industry is a myth." An industry which has turned out 46,466,335 pounds of tinplate in three months, if it be a myth, is certainly a very substantial and healthy one. But there were numerous other cases of a similar "phenomenon." Yet they are "phantomical," according to Ward, who should have been imprisoned or run out of town. The character of their demeanor all through was one of the most disgraceful that ever imposed upon a confounding people.

SMILES.

The world, while men to life do cling,
As it is they make it.

Some make the best of everything
And others take it.

—(New York Press.)

(Life:) "So you want to marry my son," said the stern mamma to the emancipated woman.

"I do."

"Can you support him in the manner in which he has been accustomed?"

"I can."

"Then take him and be happy."

(Brooklyn Eagle:) Carleton. Miss Bowstring is to make her debut as a violinist shortly; she will be the rage, without doubt.

Montauk. Why, does she play so well? Carleton. No, but she has the shapeliest arms I have ever seen.

(New York Recorder:) "I see," said Mrs. Hazleton, "that a spring of fresh water is worth $500 in the Cherokee Strip."

"What in the— Oh, yes, I see," said Hazleton, "of course stock has to be watered."

(Yankee Blade:) Tom. Did Maud tell you the truth when you asked her her age?

Jack. Yes.

Tom. What did she say?

Jack. She said it was none of my business.

(Truth:) "We should be thankful for small mercies," said the boarding-house mistress. "We have to be," replied the star boarder, as he gazed at the diminutive turkey.

(Harlem Life:) Mrs. Rafferty. Why is ut, Pat, that oysters do be out of season during the summer?

Mr. Rafferty. Sure, I am surprised at ye that do not know that. The oysters are hibernating during the summer, of coarse.

(Fall Mall Budget:) Effie. Mamma, when I'm grow up, and if I don't marry anybody, shall I be an old maid like Aunt Tabitha?

Mamma. Yes, dear.

Effie. And if I marry shall I marry somebody like pappa?

Mamma. Yes, darling.

Effie (after a pause). Well, it is a hard world for us women.

DOUBT HIS STORY.

Reported Gold Discoveries Near the Soldiers' Home not Believed.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) Many are scoffing at the story told by the lost veteran as to there being gold in the Santa Monica Mountains, notwithstanding the fact that the old miner has in his possession evidence of its existence in paying quantities within a few miles of the camp.

A veteran by the name of Johnson, in Co. D, who is an old-timer in California, says that the Mormons gave this section of the State a thorough and vigorous prospecting as early as the year 1845; that they settled in that year at San Bernardino, and swarmed over Southern California like bees prospecting and looking for gold, but to no purpose, and they abandoned the place of wealth in this direction and turned their attention to mining in other fields.

An exchange states that Judge Holcomb, the new fusion Governor-elect of Nebraska, "has a face which is an affidavit of honesty." A Populistic Governor needs such a face if anybody does.

The latest reform suggested by Miss Frances E. Willard is that women should serve on the police force in the larger cities. Now will Miss Willard give us arrest?

Corbett and Mitchell seem to have missed their calling. They should have been football players and attended the U. C. as students."

If poor old Li Hung Chang gets out of his present job alive, he can come over here and pose as a "living picture."

PITH OF THE PRESS.

(Arizona Republican:) When the Republic party comes into power again in 1896 it will promptly substitute industries for the cold and stormy winters of the East, for it is made up of bird song and blossoms, of blue skies and bright-winged butterflies, of sprouting grasses and growing grain, of ripening fruits and multitudinous harvests. If decay and feebleness must come to men, they should come slowly in this equable climate, where chill and storm and frost are such rare visitants, and the sun shines with but few interruptions from January to December.

The days which we are now enjoying since the rains are fair specimens of California winter weather—a winter that is recognized only by the almanac and that is in no one respect kindred to the cold and stormy winters of the East, for it is made up of bird song and blossoms, of blue skies and bright-winged butterflies, of sprouting grasses and growing grain, of ripening fruits and multitudinous harvests. If decay and feebleness must come to men, they should come slowly in this equable climate, where chill and storm and frost are such rare visitants, and the sun shines with but few interruptions from January to December.

The days which we are now enjoying since the rains are fair specimens of California winter weather—a winter that is recognized only by the almanac and that is in no one respect kindred to the cold and stormy winters of the East, for it is made up of bird song and blossoms, of blue skies and bright-winged butterflies, of sprouting grasses and growing grain, of ripening fruits and multitudinous harvests. WILL WINTER HERE.

Hamlin's Stable to Stay in Los Angeles.

The Eastern Flyers Will Race in About Two Weeks at the Park.

They are Expected to Arrive Over the Santa Fe Road This Morning—Silkwood May Also Try His Speed.

A train is expected to arrive on the Santa Fe road this morning from Chicago, having on board the great racehorses that will spend the winter in California. There are thirty-eight of the flyers in the lot, the pick of Hamlin & Salisbury's stables being among the number. All of the record-breakers will be seen on the Los Angeles track during the coming month at the special meeting now being arranged by the district association.

Mr. Hamlin's stable will remain at Agricultural Park during the winter, while the remainder of the train load will be taken north to spend the season at Salisbury's Pleasanton farm. The horses will be put through their paces on December 20 and for several days thereafter, giving the public ample opportunity to witness the speediest efforts of the good racers. A few are scheduled and it is even thought that Directum may be brought down from the North to add to the attractions of the natal racing event.

The stables now en route are made up in part of the following horses: Robert J., 2:04½; Fantasy, 2:06; Moonshiner, 2:09½; Nightingale, 2:10½; Ed Easton, 2:09½; Charming Chimes, 2:13½; Zenobia, 2:22½; Boy Blue, 2:25½; Bright Regent, 2:26½; Josie Chimes, 2:28½; Azote, 2:08½; Flying J., 2:04; Besie Hall, 2:12; Miss Kate, 2:24½.

Horsemen of Southern California are of the impression that Silkwood, the Orange county horse, owned by Farmer Willits, will be able to make a creditable showing against some of the Eastern crackers. Mr. Willits will undoubtedly be invited to ride one of his fast-paced pacers at the coming meeting. Then there is Klamath, 2:13, the northern trotter, who may also be entered in some of the events.

A winter racing meet is something of a novelty for this portion of the State, which will, no doubt, be appreciated by the less hardy racing fans. The meetings will have the result of bringing in visitors from all parts of the Coast, for, according to statements made by men who are in a position to know, the horses will race at no other point during the time they are stalled in this State.

BARBARA THE SAINT.CELEBRATION OF HER BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Interesting Ceremonies at Santa Barbara Last Tuesday—The Gloomy Past and the Bright Present.

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 4, 1894.—(Special Correspondence.) Today is Santa Barbara's birthday; not the city's, nor the mission's only, from which the city takes its name, but the dear saint herself, to whom the mission is dedicated.

Would you hear her story? It is old, very old, almost as old as that of the blessed Savior, for whose sake she gave her young life just when she had crossed the Jordan. Her legend is a story of sweet mystery and promise bound. It is a pathetic story, and I tell it to you as 'twas told to me, by one of the mission fathers:

It was 1833 years ago today that a beautiful baby girl came into the home of one Diocorus, a rich and influential man of noble birth, who lived in what is now a small town in Asia, called Askidem, then known as Nicomedia, capital of ancient Bithynia.

The little Barbara, for so she was called, proved to be gifted with an intelligence quite extraordinary for her beauty, and a sweet and winsome disposition. She was only child and idolized by her father, who lavished on her every luxury that his great wealth could command, her heart remained singularly pure and unaffected.

As she approached maturity, Diocorus was filled with jealous fear lest some one would win his daughter from him. So he left the oriental home for one of another making. Determined to prevent this and retain all her affection for himself, he had a very high tower built, and in this youthful Barbara was doomed to live, seeing no one but her servants and teachers, yet surrounded with all the comforts of life. Her greatest trial was her filial devotion that she seemed not to have objected to this mode of life, but accepted it with gentle obedience, and devoted herself entirely to study, of which she was passionately fond. In this she was indulged by her father, who realized the superiority of a learned mind, and provided the best instructors of the time.

Diocorus was a most idolatrous pagan, and worshipped his idols with an all-absorbing superstition; but Barbara, through one of her teachers, heard of Origen, the great Christian scholar (some of whose learned writings are still extant), and communicated with him by some means, receiving his instructions accepted his faith, and was finally baptized. Believing charity to be one of the greatest of virtues, she renounced the world and consecrated herself to a life of holiness in the service of the Lord Jesus Christ.

In the meantime Diocorus, as may be inferred, found that the family aggrandizement could be greatly promoted, and his own power increased by his alliance with a certain distinguished person, and all his plans regarding her were at once altered.

Repenting one day to her father, he told her, "I am very much attached to your schemes, and begged her to accept an offer which meant so much to them both. So repulsive was the thought, and in direct opposition to her holy vows, that she expressed her disapprobation with much decision. Her father left her and went on a long journey, hoping on his return to find her more tractable. But instead she was as firm as ever, though she received him with great kindness, and assured him that her love for him was so intense that there was no room in her affections for another. She besought him to permit her to leave the tower and minister to him, as he was now growing old and needed her care and companionship. To this he readily consented, believing that by mingling with the world she would soon discern the wisdom of his wishes and grant his request.

On entering the house after her childhood her eyes fell on the idols with which it was filled. Overwhelmed with indignation at their presence, she expressed her abhorrence for them and her belief in the God of the Christians. So enraged did Diocorus become in order to subdue her and compel the worship of idols, he gave her up to be punished as a Christian. She bore her afflictions with sweet humility and Christian grace, and, finding her inexorable, the judge ordered that she be beheaded. It is said that her father asked a special privilege, that he be permitted her execution.

To the last she never faltered, but with the calm and beautiful radiance of a saint gave herself up, a martyr to the Christian religion. But the moment the revolting deed was committed, Diocorus suffered the penalty of his crime—struck dead by the hand of the living God, who avenged the death of his saints.

Her martyrdom occurred in the reign of the barbarous Maximinus, who was eight feet tall, and wore his wife's bracelet on his ring finger. He became Emperor of Rome in 235, and died in the hands of his enemies. He was a cruel and rapacious, even in that cruel time, and in an insurrection he lost his life at the hands of his own soldiers.

The feast of Santa Barbara, virgin and martyr, is found in the Greek, Latin, Sicilian and Mexican calendar, and occurs on the 4th of December, the day on which, in 1756, the holy cross was erected on the site of Santa Barbara Mission.

This is the story of Santa Barbara, as told by one of the mission fathers, and may her birth is celebrated with great solemnity by the gray friars at the old mission.

The church is newly swept and garnished, the altars freshly dressed in snow-white altar cloths, edged with wide lace of becoming fineness, and surmounted with many candles and a great profusion of incense burners. The organ case, which is rare on occasions, while the saint herself, high above the altar, has a vase of pampas plumes and a tall candle on either side, and a bouquet of paper flowers at her feet. A light burns before St. Francis of Assisi and the Child, bearing down to her from the cross and one before Mary and Jesus after the crucifixion, and all the saints have been remembered and received some sort of decoration.

A mass was said at 6 o'clock in the morning and high mass two hours later, and again services in the afternoon.

The day is peculiarly fitting, the commemoration of Hl. so sweet and sad. A soft haze obscures the sun, and the warm, dreamy air is so still that the perfume-pepper branches sway only with the weight of the blossoms. Bluebirds and finches that sit in and out among them, and twitter their joy in existence. A solitary visitor, who came early and remains all day at the mission, sits silently on the stone steps for hours, with eyes half closed, yet seeing the fishes in the green fountain, the chattering birds, the ships on the ocean, and all the beauty of landscape that has charmed the beholder ever since Father Junipero first looked upon the wondrous picture and said: "Here will I plant the holy cross." The distant crowing of a cock heard, the sound of far-away trains, the sleepy drone of a bee and the occasional sound of a heavy footfall within the mission's massive walls, but never the sound of a human voice to break the stillness, nor sight of a human face, except as the carriage of the priest drives along the roadway, or the arrow of a bullet heads into more than a century of battle with time—and enters the church. A friar enters at a side door, and whispering as he passes: "It is devotions now," ascends the stairs to the organ loft and awakens a low, wavering melody and at the devout Catholic finds a seat in the center of the room. The candles are lighted; there is an odor of burning incense; the services have begun.

But the wind now stirs the banana leaves; there is a continuous sound of footsteps within, a clatter of dishes, bells ring again and again, a murmur of deer voices is heard and for a time the spell of silence is broken, but not for a time—everything is as hushed before the still—until preparations are making for the 2 o'clock service.

As various toned bells ring out from the old tower, the solitary visitor glances up at the statue of Santa Barbara in a high niche over the entrance—a statue which is the armorial device of the friars head in more than a century of battle with time—and enters the church. A friar enters at a side door, and whispering as he passes: "It is devotions now," ascends the stairs to the organ loft and awakens a low, wavering melody and at the devout Catholic finds a seat in the center of the room. The candles are lighted; there is an odor of burning incense; the services have begun.

The robe of the officiating priest is very costly and beautiful; his voice is rich and full as he responds to the choir of gray-robed monks. Two or three of the gray-robed friars drop their robes, slide softly in, and after crossing themselves with holy water from the stone font, kneel at the forms nearest the door and perform their devotions. There are no seats there, so they kneel during the entire service. The small children kneel beside them and opposite are two well dressed young men with some swarthy features. Two or three more persons in more modern apparel, with fairer skins, yet with the penetrating dark eyes peculiar to their race, take seats well in front. Otherwise the old mission is empty.

One of the thin-faced, fair-haired priest passes down the aisle, over the trap door through which the former priests who have passed away were lowered into their last resting-place beneath the high altar; but if he misses them or their people, or feels aught of the loneliness, his face does not show it.

Some of the best-known of the friars are absent, too. Father O'Keefe is at San Juan Capistrano with his young novitiate; Father Hugo is in Chicago; and Brother Anthony, who for forty years has been a familiar figure about the mission, never failing to come from it but twice all that time, and then only on a short errand to the town—Brother Anthony, who was always at hand to answer the tourist's questions or show them up the long, dark staircase to the belfry tower—is now 80 years old and too infirm to leave his cell, except on a day, when he shuffles out into the sunshine for a little while for his daily exercise.

But with all the changes time has wrought, the services are just as devout as if the hundreds of neophytes still filled the long, curiously ornamented nave, and the little friars can secure reduced rates on the railroads, and special terms at the hotels of Santa Cruz.

Prof. Joseph le Conte, president of the association, will deliver, during the meeting, his retiring address on the "Psychical Relation of Man to Animals."

HIS THIRD ATTEMPT.

J. H. Conrad Again Tries to Kill Himself.

Despondent and Practically Penniless He Wanted to End His Life.

Formerly a Well-known and Prosperous Business Man of Butte, Mont.—A Very Sad Case.

A man named Joseph H. Conrad attempted suicide Thursday night, and his condition was not discovered until yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where Dr. Bryant treated him for morphine poisoning, and at last reports the man was alive, though in such a critical condition that his chances for life were only very meager.

Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock he went to the Reed House on First street and engaged a room, saying he would leave it at 6 o'clock. He went to bed immediately, but before retiring requested the landlady to bring him a glass of fresh water, which she did. It was in this glass of water that Conrad swallowed the morphine.

At 6 o'clock he had not gone, but Mrs. Reed thought nothing of this until yesterday. At 10 a.m. yesterday the man had not yet gone, so she procured a ladder and, looking in over the transom, saw that he was lying in bed breathing heavily and painfully, while his face and hands were very much discolored. She immediately sent word to the police, and when the patrol wagon responded the man and his effects were removed to the Receiving Hospital. The stomach pump was promptly applied and the man vomited half a bottle of morphine from a cylindrical bottle about an inch and a half in diameter at the base and two inches long—enough to kill several men. The bottle was stamped as bottles containing poison are, and was purchased by Powers & Wightman of Philadelphia. The man had bitten his tongue and cheeks, and his mouth was bloody and frothy.

It was learned from a friend of his, H. T. L. Bingham, with whom he had intended travelling to Guatemala, that Conrad was a successful cotton merchant in Helena and Butte, Mont., and that he has two brothers who are bankers, one in Albuquerque, N. M., and the other in Butte, Mont. It was to the latter that Conrad sent his wife the very day he planned his suicide, and she and her two little children are travelling and awaiting news of the condition of her husband and father. It seems Conrad had done well in business until the closing of the silver mines compelled him to close his doors, and though he possesses real property in Montana, he has been unable to realize on it and has been very much embarrassed and distressed.

Since his arrival here, about six months ago, he has been devoting a good part of his time to playing poker, a pastime that he seems to have thought was sufficiently distracting to ease his mind, but he lost heavily so that, so sent his family north with a will. He had made a trip through Mexico to Guatemala, where he expected to build up his fallen fortunes.

But the departure of his family made despondent, and his losses left him almost penniless, so he spent several hours looking around town for his friend, Bingham, and not finding him, went and engaged the room in which he had planned to die. When found he had only forty cents on his person.

He was an incessant smoker of cigarettes and it is supposed by many that this habit was much to blame for his condition. This is his third attempt at suicide by the same route, the second attempt having been made last August in his room at the Hollenbeck, at which time he had a very narrow escape from death. This time he may be more successful.

Last night two well-dressed gentlemen went to the police station and informed the clerk that Mr. Conrad and children had not left town as they had hoped, but were still at the Bellevue Terrace Hotel, where they had been boarding. She had no gone and the long absence of her husband caused her such uneasiness that she instituted the inquiry. She was not aware of his condition. Up to a late hour the man was still alive.

ANOTHER UNFORTUNATE.

A. H. Weir Commits Suicide by Taking Laudanum.

A. H. Weir, who resided at No. 225 Downey avenue, was found dying in the willows up the river late yesterday afternoon, and was carried to the County Hospital, where he died later in the evening.

A stockman riding along the river heard a noise of gasping breathing in the brush and, upon investigating, found the man lying there with a two-ounce laudanum bottle under him. Everything possible was done for him at the hospital, but the poison had too much time in which to take effect, and the man expired without regaining consciousness.

He was an old man, who worked for the Southern Pacific Railway as watchman on one of their bridges. He left two letters in his pockets, which will explain his motives. The first was dated, but not addressed, and read as follows:

LOST ANGELA, Dec. 7, '94.

"I have had a cancer of the liver, 7, '94, and there are times when it almost sets me wild and I hope that my darling wife, son and daughter will forgive me for taking this step. I took laudanum, son, you must be good to your mother. I reside at No. 225 Downey avenue. My name is H. H. WEIR."

The Second reads:

"Mr. Stephens: I very much regret to leave you in this way, but I have been troubled with catarrh so long that my eye trouble me very much. Then in wet weather the catarrh almost strangles me. I have you to thank for acting in this way. So I will bid you good-bye thanking you for all your kindness, I am your true friend and brother."

"A. H. WEIR."

P. S. (on separate paper) "God-by wife, daughter, son, Willis and John, and Sister Laura and grandsons, also the brothers of East Los Angeles Lodge A.O.U.W. (Signed) A. H. W."

It is presumed the latter letter is intended for Clarence E. Stephens, the road-master of the Southern Pacific Company, and the reference to his inability to see well and his regret at leaving so suddenly are in relation to his position as watchman.

His Identity Established.

The identity of the strange man, who was found dead where he had hanged himself, near M. M. Green's residence, five miles south of the city on Vermont avenue, was not ascertained until the morning when Coroner Cates examined his effects. He was named Charles Crawleyman, and it was learned he has a son in Reno, Nev. His trunk was found at the Strasbourg House, corner Alameda and Ducommun streets.

The Coroner's jury yesterday morning found that he had come to his death by hanging with suicidal intent. The body was yet warm when found. It was taken to Peck, Chan & Co.'s undertaking establishment, where it now is. No letters, or articles of value, were found on the man's person. His name is unknown, and he is one of the army of unfortunate now wandering over this section. His son has been telegraphed to, but no answer has yet been received.

THE EAST SIDE.

Running Out the Tramps—The Ladies' Bazaar—Union Revivals.

The tramps who were washed into town by the rain of Wednesday are beginning to leave, and by tonight the city will probably be well cleaned of them. The local police had a large job for a few days, however, running the fellows down and warning them out of the city limits.

There is a bad crossing on the north side of Downey avenue at Truman street that should be attended to at once. The plank of which the walk is made has been worn through so that the two ends are loose and stick four or five inches above the surface of the ground, tripping passers-by and threatening some one with serious injury.

The ladies bazaar, which has been the attraction at the Presbyterian Church for a couple of days past, closed last evening with a "tremendous" success. The attendance has been good, and the ladies' society is the gainer by a number of dollars which will be put to good use in some of the departments of church work.

The union revival at the church have proved exceedingly interesting to those attending, though the weather has been a factor in the matter. Mr. Watt, the talker and earnest worker, and it is believed that next week will see larger audiences.

Mrs. Mary H. Miller, formerly State Librarian of Iowa, arrived in the city on Tuesday, and will spend the winter here. She is the guest of W. W. Stockwell and family on Downey avenue.

GATHMAN'S TELESCOPE.

PROF. T. S. C. LOWE THINKS IT FEASIBLE.

He Also Takes Issue with Prof. Barnard on the Heat Waves—Places Where They do not Exist.

During his recent visit to Chicago Prof. T. S. C. Lowe inspected and passed an opinion on the new form of telescope invented by a man in that city, giving the system, as quoted in an Associated Press dispatch, his unqualified endorsement. He was asked today for his opinion on the San Diego scheme to mount such a telescope on a mountain in the back country of that county, and also what he had to say about Prof. Barnard's criticism of the Chicago man's idea, as given in a dispatch printed in Friday's Times.

"Well," said the professor, "as for the San Diego scheme, I don't want to say much, but you know San Diego. The new form of telescope referred to I examined in Chicago. The inventor has succeeded in making a seven-inch glass out of numbers of sections of lenses, as he proposes to make a large one, and it is quite possible. Through his seven-inch telescope I could plainly see the colors of stars, their colors, as well as the spots on Mars, and that was in an atmosphere much inferior to ours. Now, in my opinion, if a seven-inch glass can be made perfect by this system it seems possible to make a larger one. Any one would be rash to take issue with Prof. Barnard on any astronomical subject. He is right in main in what he says about the trouble that astronomers experience with heat waves in the atmosphere, and though it is not possible to quiet these waves, it is quite feasible to find locations where such disturbances do not exist. If Prof. Barnard is satisfied with the telescopic conditions on the summit of the Sierra Madre range of mountains back of Pasadena, he would know where there is no such trouble as he alludes to. It is notorious," said the professor, "that Mt. Hamilton is quite a hot place, and that is due to the great amount of heat radiated from the sun, and that is the reason why it is quite practicable."

"How about San Diego as a location for an observatory?" was asked.

"Well," was the reply, "if you go inland you will find the heat waves worse than almost anywhere else, for there is more heat here and favorable conditions on these Sierra Madre Mountains, not to be found anywhere else in the world."

Late last night two well-dressed gentlemen went to the police station and informed the clerk that Mr. Conrad and children had not left town as they had hoped, but were still at the Bellevue Terrace Hotel, where they had been boarding. She had no gone and the long absence of her husband caused her such uneasiness that she instituted the inquiry. She was not aware of his condition. Up to a late hour the man was still alive.

ANOTHER UNFORTUNATE.

A. H. Weir Commits Suicide by Taking Laudanum.

A. H. Weir, who resided at No. 225 Downey avenue, was found dying in the willows up the river late yesterday afternoon, and was carried to the County Hospital, where he died later in the evening.

A stockman riding along the river heard a noise of gasping breathing in the brush and, upon investigating, found the man lying there with a two-ounce laudanum bottle under him. Everything possible was done for him at the hospital, but the poison had too much time in which to take effect, and the man expired without regaining consciousness.

He was an old man, who worked for the Southern Pacific Railway as watchman on one of their bridges. He left two letters in his pockets, which will explain his motives. The first was dated, but not addressed, and read as follows:

LOST ANGELA, Dec. 7, '94.

"I have had a cancer of the liver, 7, '94, and there are times when it almost sets me wild and I hope that my darling wife, son and daughter will forgive me for taking this step. I took laudanum, son, you must be good to your mother. I reside at No. 225 Downey avenue. My name is H. H. WEIR."

P. S. (on separate paper) "God-by wife, daughter, son, Willis and John, and Sister Laura and grandsons, also the brothers of East Los Angeles Lodge A.O.U.W. (Signed) A. H. W."

It is presumed the latter letter is intended for Clarence E. Stephens, the road-master of the Southern Pacific Company, and the reference to his inability to see well and his regret at leaving so suddenly are in relation to his position as watchman.

His Identity Established.

The identity of the strange man, who was found dead where he had hanged himself, near M. M. Green's residence, five miles south of the city on Vermont avenue, was not ascertained until the morning when Coroner Cates examined his effects. He was named Charles Crawleyman, and it was learned he has a son in Reno, Nev. His trunk was found at the Strasbourg House, corner Alameda and Ducommun streets.

The Coroner's jury yesterday morning found that he had come to his death by hanging with suicidal intent. The body was yet warm when found. It was taken to Peck, Chan & Co.'s undertaking establishment, where it now is. No letters, or articles of value, were found on the man's person. His name is unknown, and he is one of the army of unfortunate now wandering over this section. His son has been telegraphed to, but no answer has yet been received.

THE FAKE RAILROAD.

San Diegans Becoming Tired of the Joke.

Only Fifty People Attend the Meeting to Promote the Enterprise.

Mayne Secures the Passage of a Resolution Regretting His Resignation as the Head of the Concern.

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) A masterly humorist like Charles Dickens would have found abundant material for pen-pictures at the meeting of citizens in the Chamber of Commerce to consider the San Diego Pacific Railroad project last night. Of the 18,000 to 20,000 people in the city only fifty-five were not representative citizens. The report of the committee appointed December 4 to formulate a plan of action to be submitted to the meeting was adopted with certain recommendations. In this report was the following paragraph:

"Now we find an almost universal opposition to C. E. Mayne as president of said road. Owing to this opposition the proper encouragement is not given. We recognize Mr. Mayne's services and consider him well qualified for the position of president, although he is not in a position to be of valuable assistance in carrying out the scheme, but the indifference of San Diego is vital to the enterprise. Judging from a month's experience and the facts brought out in interviews with our citizens we realize the utter impossibility of harmonizing the various elements."

It is recommended that E. L. Story be chosen president of the road. Mr. Story is believed to be a man of business ability. The transfer of his property to his wife a few years ago caused comment.

In discussing the report of the committee Citizen G. W. Magwood, a dealer in second-hand goods, told the citizens upon whom he considered an all-round rustler of acknowledged ability. Mr. Magwood called attention to the great need of a railroad connecting San Diego with the outside world, referring to the injury being done to this city by persons in Los Angeles who do not understand the condition of affairs here.

On motion of Judge Kinney the reference to the opposition to Mayne was struck out of the committee's report. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that the people of San Diego assembled in the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the San Diego Pacific railroad project initiated by C. E. Mayne to build a railroad from San Diego eastward, known as the San Diego Pacific, do hereby regret the resignation of Mr. Mayne as president of said road, and hereby tender to him the thanks of this meeting for the services he has rendered in connection therewith."

Two hours before this meeting opened the chief promoters of the meeting admitted to the Times correspondent that with a man of Mayne's notorious business record as president, the San Diego Pacific road could not possibly be built.

The resolution does not represent the sentiment of the respectable business men of San Diego. It represents the feeling of a small number of individuals who are actuated by motives of honest interest in the welfare of San Diego, but some of whom are regarded with suspicion by the sensible San Diegans who have done and will do more for San Diego's advancement than will a band of business adventurers mixed with a sprinkling of misguided honest men. It is felt that the V. P. leader of the A.R.U. will come here to investigate the proposed road. Debs is the man who last summer advised railroad men to "save your money and buy a gun" with the implied purpose of overturning law and order. Mr. Bachman, one of the officers of the road, was leader of the A.R.U. here on June 4. It is felt that the V. P. leader of the A.R.U. will allow a first place in the procession, in advance of the United States flag, and the United States and State troops. The weak-kneed marshal of the parade, Maj. Sweeny, U.S.A., (retired) allowed this impudent leader to march his command ahead of the G.A.R. party to the disgust of the spectators, who held up signs reading "Out with the V. P." and "In with the G.A.R." The V. P. leader of the A.R.U. was at that moment striving to drag in the dust by the resistance to law and order throughout the land. There is a sense of decency among San Diegans who influence public opinion here which repudiates any enterprise fathered by men who have stood ready to tear down "Old Glory" when they were not prepared to be paddled with the odium attached to any such set of men. The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce officially repudiated the San Diego Pacific Railroad by declining to lend the name of the chamber to the promoters of the scheme as a reference. Members of the board censure Secretary H. H. Young's practice in giving his personal association by his efforts to further the scheme, they declined, and some of them would be glad to see Mr. Young retired from a position, where he is likely to bring San Diego into discredit.

Col. Chalmers Scott, with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Will D. Gray, and her small boy, have arrived from Virginia, where Mr. D. Gray and son died recently when descending to the coast. Mrs. Gray has been residing at the home of her son, Mr. Gray, who was at that moment striving to drag in the dust by the resistance to law and order throughout the land. There is a sense of decency among San Diegans who influence public opinion here which repudiates any enterprise fathered by men who have stood ready to tear down "Old Glory" when they were not prepared to be paddled with the odium attached to any such set of men. ORCHARD AND FARM RANCHO AND STOCKYARD

RURAL LIFE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Crops and Markets.

The rain has come at last and the croakers who were beginning to talk about a dry season will have to take a back seat. Up to this writing the rain has been a good drenching one and as soon as it is over the farmers will be able to go to work in earnest.

The probability is that a very large area will be planted to grain this year, especially barley, as stocks are light and there will be little if anything carried over from the past season. The market for barley in San Francisco has been firmer during the week and the present rain will start a good demand for seed.

The rain will be a special blessing to those who have stock to feed, as hay has been so high in prices of late as to make it almost ruinous for those who have to feed many animals.

There has been a somewhat better demand for dried fruit. Stocks are being cleared up in the East and the outlook for prices is better than it has been for some time past.

The coming orange crop is beginning to attract some attention and there are many speculations as to its amount. From the most authentic estimates it appears that it will be considerably larger than last year, although the crop of seedling oranges is light. On the other hand there will be a heavy crop of navels and a large area of new orchard will come into bearing this season. Most of the crop will be handled under the exchange system, although there will be some outside fruit for commission merchants to pick up. There are some tangerine oranges in the local market.

The business of raising hogs has been more neglected in this season than it should be, although a good many people have gone into the business since the Cudahy packing-house was established here. There is, however, room for much greater development in this line. At the price paid by the packing-house—5 cents pound on the hoof—there is big money in the business, and the present output ought to be largely increased.

The Citron.

The citron tree or shrub will grow wherever lemon or orange trees flourish. It succeeds better in sandy soil, however, and in the neighborhood of the sea.

Great care is needed in its cultivation. The average crop per acre can hardly be ascertained, as the size of crop depends on so many conditions, such as the climate and soil. The citrons, which are subsequently converted into the candied citron of commerce, are grown chiefly in Greece, Calabria, and the islands of Sicily and Corsica. The latter place is said to produce the finest fruit. There are four ways of raising this plant—by cuttings, by seed, by grafting and by budding. The latter is preferable, and the bitter orange is used as stock upon which to bud, it being hardy and less liable to disease than those that produce the choicer fruits. The trees should be fertilized once a year, between October and March, with old stable manure, and unless the ground be moist or damp they ought to be watered in the dry season twice a week. This plant is much more tender than the lemon, and does better in a sheltered location. It blossoms between March and May, and up to the months of September and October, at which time the fruit is ripe.

F. A. Kimball of National City has a number of trees raised from buddings on orange stock. He says: "I have seen no other tree which has so quickly adapted itself to our conditions, nor one which exhibits such a robust character. The foliage is beautiful, the growing shoots being of a reddish-purple color and very rich. The ripened leaves are not so dark as the orange, nor yet so light as the lemon. I have no hesitation in saying that, from all I can learn, the citron will pay an enormous profit, as the fruit may be kept many months after it is picked, and can be processed by any one who understands the art of preserving."

The production of the citron is one of the industries that should receive attention in Southern California. The fruit is experimentally grown here, and matures as perfectly in this region as do other members of the citrus family. In the Mediterranean region the production of the citron is highly profitable, and there is every reason to suppose that the return to the grower here would likewise be large. The fruit is packed in barrels, with brine, for exportation to France and England from the districts in which it is grown abroad, but here it could be sold to local crystallization works, which would put it on the market in its regular commercial form. There is no reason why citron should be imported to the extent of many thousands of dollars annually, when the same article can be produced here to the extent desired. Southern California is a fine field for the development of neglected industries.

Canagre.

Several inquiries have been received by The Times in regard to canagre, the new tanning plant, concerning which we have published several articles of late. We recommend those who desire to learn more on this subject to write to the Agricultural College at Los Angeles, N. M., for a bulletin, which that institution has published on the subject. In this bulletin may be found full and authentic information.

Textile Products.

Cotton has been grown on a small scale, but of excellent quality, for many years in several sections of California. Only lack of a remunerative local market and the existence of practically prohibitory freight rates have prevented this industry from assuming large proportions. Some quite extensive experiments in cotton culture have been made at various points in the San Joaquin Valley, the uniform result being the demonstration of the feasibility of producing a remunerative crop of good quality, provided the question of markets could be solved by the establishment of local manufacturing enterprises which should consume the staple. Until this is done cotton-growing is not apt to be largely engaged in by California farmers.

The cultivation of ramie and the production and manufacture of fiber and fabrics therefrom bids fair to become an important industry upon this Coast.

The absence of proper machinery for us that it is not an exhaustive crop, although it yields such an immense amount of nutriment. Those who are wise will grow cassava. Those who desire the greatest amount of product for the least amount of labor, will grow cassava. Those who desire to be self-supporting and dependent on transportation companies will grow cassava. Those who desire sleek cattle, fat pigs and poultry in good condition will grow cassava. Those who desire a palatable and nutritious product that can be used in the household will grow cassava. In short those who realize the desire product that can be grown in Florida, will grow cassava and grow it abundantly.

Saving Seed.

Seed dealers generally take precaution to keep their stock pure by careful selection, and, as a rule, farmers and gardeners will find it better and cheaper in the end to buy seed of a reliable seedman. When care is taken in selecting, however, and seed is carefully preserved for a series of years, a good strain can be secured, which probably gives increased yields of better quality. Prof. Taff, in writing for the American Agriculturist, gives the following directions for collecting and caring for seeds:

A series of sieves is useful both for seeds with a dry covering or pod and those formed in a fleshy fruit. These sizes are used for each size of seed, so as to remove the larger stems, leaves, etc., that is just large enough to allow the seeds to pass through, and a third so fine that the seeds cannot get through, but which will allow the removal of the dirt and lint. If large amounts are to be saved, a nail and frame will be preferable. When most of the seeds are ripe, the stems are cut off, or in some cases the entire plant is pulled. If the seeds do not ripen evenly, it is sometimes necessary to make several cuttings. In case they shall ready, the stems are placed upon papers or cloth sheets, and when dry enough to thresh them. This is done with flail if large quantities are to be threshed, but small amounts can be rubbed out with the hand, using a coarse sieve if it is available. The seeds should then be cleaned, using the fan-mill for larger quantities, and the windmill for smaller ones.

The scheme, as well as the fact that the amount of fiber produced to the acre is so large that ample returns are certain to accrue to the producer. It is not too much to predict that nothing stands in the way of California building up an industry in this direction which shall becoming a special blessing to those who have to make it almost ruinous for those who have to feed many animals.

There has been a somewhat better demand for dried fruit. Stocks are being cleared up in the East and the outlook for prices is better than it has been for some time past.

The coming orange crop is beginning to attract some attention and there are many speculations as to its amount. As to the possibility of successfully producing silk on this Coast there is, of course, no doubt. Experiments have been undertaken in many widely separated localities, and wherever proper care has been exercised they have been successful, if not profitable. Of this there can be no doubt.

Profit of Cassava.

(Sherman Adams in Florida Agriculturist) As it will soon be time to save cassava-seed and as it seems to me the cultivation of this valuable esculent ought to be increased a thousand-fold each year until every family in Florida has its cassava patch. I venture a bold prediction that the deplorably neglected cassava, if given a chance, will become the great staple of the South.

It is evident that the production of cassava is the key to prosperity. With

PASADENA.

RESULT OF A TERRIBLE FALL OF A PAINTER.

Dr. Grinnell's Collection of Birds Endangered by Fire—Another Bad Day for Runaways—Personals.

PASADENA, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) A fire alarm this afternoon called the department to Box No. 37, corner of Villa street and Marengo avenue, where occasion was an incident first the house and of Dr. Fordyce Grinnell. The joists and flooring had been ignited under the fireplace, the heat having penetrated the two inches of cement which constituted the hearth, and when the department arrived a dense volume of smoke, pouring from beneath the floor, was the only visible sign of the smoldering woodwork. By efficient work under the personal direction of the Chief, the fireplace was quickly torn up, exposing the charred and smoking timbers to the acridous fumes of a chemical extinguisher. When Mrs. Grinnell had been engaged to give a concert in Pasadena under the auspices of the Throop Institute, on December 20, D. C. SOLDIERS' HOME.

Almost an Overplus of Members—Other Local Notes.

SOLDIERS' HOME. Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) Friday morning the daily call showed the home to have reached high-water mark, in matter of membership. The tally was: Present, 1316; on furlough, 242; total, 1558. It is officially given out that the limit has now been reached, and that further admissions are out of the question. The home officers have endeavored to take care of all worthy applicants, and within six months the membership has been increased fully 25 per cent. But Congress has made no provision for additional buildings, and further increase of membership is, of necessity, restricted. Already not less than forty men are sleeping on the floor, and the five buildings are crowded to their utmost capacity. The management is able to take care of the present membership in the way of tables and supplies, but the exhaustion of sleeping apartments settles the question of further increase.

Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, from the War Department, Washington, is now at the home, upon a visit of inspection, and will remain some time yet giving Dr. Bunnemeyer, his expert accountant, time for a careful inspection of the books and himself time for expert examination into all the details of the home management. Gen. Breckinridge is a man of contagious gaiety, which, even the mildest discipline of a lifetime has failed to subdue.

Extra-duty men at the home were paid their November salaries on Friday. The amount disbursed was, in round numbers, $5400. On account of the approaching holidays, it will be made about December 22, and will amount to over $20,000. This amount, which is paid out in coin, is now handled by the express company. Treasurer Thornton having abandoned the former practice of bringing it personally from Los Angeles.

The builders were fortunate enough to have the governor's house completely under roof before the recent rain. Progress upon the building was, therefore, uninterrupted by the storm.

Robert Smith, victim of the recent railroad accident, furnished one of the most touching scenes at the funeral service of the Campbell-Johnson lands. Gen. C. S. Campbell-Johnson held a conference on the subject here Thursday and arranged the details. This is a serious subject for South Pasadena, and the master may be fixed up.

Clarence Bunnell's horse ran away today from his home on Union street, carrying along the horse he had attached. The frightened animal bolted up through part of the Campbell-Johnson lands. He was admitted to the home from Norwalk, April 25, 1889. At the time of his tragic death he was 66 years old.

The second death was that of Theodore H. Halsey, a member of the California Infantry. He was admitted to the home from San Francisco in October of the present year, and at the time of his death was 77 years old.

The effect of the recent rain was greatly to improve the appearance of the home grounds, the foliage was washed free from dust and abides repainted. The always-handsome landscape is even handsomer than usual at the present time.

Nevertheless, this is the exact season of the year when visitors are fewest. The summer travel is all gone, and the winter crowds have suffered no inconvenience from the cooler weather. Heat from the boiler-house has been supplied to all the buildings, and general comfort has been the result.

The ladies of the home pleasantly entertained Mr. and Mrs. Kehoe at Assembly Hall, with the usual Thursday evening programme, and like other entertainments, this re-emphasized the need of a larger room for social gatherings at the home. The present hall is hopelessly inadequate. On that account the recent musicals were given in Santa Rita Hall, with lack of room. It should have been given here. The expenses were accordingly multiplied many times, and the profits correspondingly diminished.

Gen. Breckinridge, while here, is the guest of Dr. H. E. Hasse.

ADDITIONS MADE TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Trouble in the Banks of the W. T. U. Growing Out of the Recent Political Strife—Notes and Persons.

SAN BERNARDINO, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) If it is true that there is a lack of interest in literary pursuits in this city, as has been asserted, there is a strong determination to make this condition a thing of the past very short order. In evidence of this one has stated just now in the San Bernardino public library. A lively discussion is being indulged in respecting the proposed expenditure of $300 for new books to be added to the library. There is not a soul who objects to the sum being spent for this purpose. On the contrary, it is evident that it is generally regretted that there is not several times this amount of money available for additions to the library. The interest is centered about the books to be selected. The desire is that they may be secured the best books possible for the general public. The books will at all times be such books as the public generally desires to read, and furthermore that each volume added may serve to elevate and not degrade the literary taste of the reader. A committee will probably be appointed to aid in making up a list of books.

W. C. T. U.

There is war in the San Bernardino W. C. T. U., and it has reached such a state that the name of the organization is a misnomer when applied to the San Bernardino W. C. T. U. The trouble is concerning the president of the local unit, M. F. Gill, and was started because of the participation of the women of the union in the political strife during the last campaign. Mrs. Gill was the moving spirit in the movement for a mock election for the purpose of securing expression from the women upon the merits of the respective candidates. Not all the W. C. T. U. members are woman suffragists, and some opposed the movement, especially under the leadership of Mrs. Gill, as she had not deported herself in accordance with the ideas of right. This was very much rankled in the mind of Mrs. Gill, who submitted her resignation, then so worked up her members that she was permitted to withdraw it. Those opposing her say that it is a shame that she should be permitted to wear the purity badge and stand at the head of the association, while the others about her are consistent and stand to her to the head until she can vindicate herself. The facts have taken such an attitude that the association is now neither womanly, Christian nor temperate, and not in union.

REDLANDS.

REDLANDS, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) According to the Southern Pacific rain gauge there was less than an inch of rain in this city for the entire month of November, and before the rain came on December 1st, there was about two inches of rainfall. The mean maximum temperature was 40 deg. below the mean maximum for the same period, thus showing unusually cold nights for last November, and consequently a wide daily range.

DR. STREET-CAR TALK.

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 7.—(Special Correspondence.) Dr. F. M. Gardner, voluntary meteorological observer in this city, states in his weather report for November that the highest temperature during the month was 98 deg., on the 7th; the lowest was 32 deg., freezing point, on the 21st; the mean of the highest reached each day was 82.6 deg., and that of the lowest point reached each day was 40.7 deg., showing that the average difference between the highest and lowest was 40 deg. There were light frosts on the mornings of the 21st and 26th. The prevailing direction of the wind was from the west. There was no rain whatever during the month and no cloudy days. There were twenty-five clear days, and the remaining five were fair. There was an average of 88 per cent. of clear sky from the observation deck of the city hall. The largest percentage of sunshine, together with the total absence of rain, were the chief characteristics of the month's weather.

The mean maximum temperature for the past twelve years was 72.50, this year being much warmer than the average, and the minimum temperatures the same as November in the twelve years. The mean minimum temperature was 40 deg. below the mean maximum for the same period, thus showing unusually cold nights for last November, and consequently a wide daily range.
